

June 17, 2019

The Honorable Tom Wolf
Governor
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
225 Main Capitol Building
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17120

Dear Governor Wolf,

We, the undersigned concerned citizens and organization leaders, are writing to call on you to direct your Department of Health to immediately begin an investigation into cancers diagnosed in all counties where shale gas drilling, fracking and infrastructure buildout has occurred following the recent Pittsburgh Post-Gazette series “Human Toll: Risk and exposure in gas lands.” This is a public health crisis that requires immediate and significant action. We further call on you to suspend permitting of gas drilling activities until it has been demonstrated that shale gas activity was not the cause.

The investigative reporting by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette has identified that at least 46 children in Fayette, Greene, Washington, and Westmoreland counties have been suffering from rare forms of cancer since 2008. That report documents at least 27 cases of Ewing sarcoma, a rare bone cancer that only affects between 200 and 250 people across the entire country each year. The reporting has confirmed 13 deaths of children and young adults from cancer in this time period. The reporting does not include cases of adults, or cases diagnosed in other counties where drilling has occurred. Obviously, this high number of cancer cases among children in four counties in southwest Pennsylvania over the last eleven years is not only heartbreaking but extremely unusual.

These four counties overlie the Marcellus and Utica Shales and have been the center of the buildout of gas drilling and fracking and the associated infrastructure for the past 15 years. Just over 9,000 wells have been drilled in these counties since 2004, and your Department of Environmental Protection continues to issue additional permits.

Scientific evidence about the harmful toxic chemicals used in gas drilling and fracking activities strongly suggest a connection. Many of the chemicals used in these activities are known carcinogens and many pose a particularly high risk to children and at-risk populations. Numerous peer-reviewed public health studies have found gas drilling and fracking activities associated with low birth weight babies, birth defects, asthma and other respiratory issues, increased rates of hospitalization, and various other health impacts.¹

For instance, a Yale study found that at least 55 chemicals used in the fracking process are known, probable or possible carcinogens.² The study's authors stated that their findings "support the need for investigation into the relationship between [Unconventional Oil & Gas] development and risk of cancer in general and childhood leukemia in particular." Numerous studies have found dangerous levels of air pollution, including carcinogens, associated with drilling, fracking, and infrastructure sites.³

This ongoing public health crisis calls for immediate action. The Editorial Board of the Pittsburgh Post Gazette recently called on state officials to conduct an investigation into the childhood cancer cases. We also call on you to direct your Department of Health to begin a formal investigation into the cause of these childhood cancer cases and to stop issuing permits for drilling and fracking in the state while this investigation commences.
